Important Safety Precautions

- Before your first use of the Power Bank or after long-term storage, the Power Bank may have gradually discharged automatically. Fully charge it before you use it.
- Please note that it normally takes two or three complete charging and discharging cycles after the initial charging of the unit in order to achieve its optimal performance.
- As a precaution we recommend using only the charging cable and connection adapters applied with the Power Bank. Other charging cables might work but cannot be guaranteed. They might be harmful, causing damage to your device and/or the Power Bank's internal components.
- Use the Power Bank in areas that provide adequate ventilation. Do not use in bags, purses, or in pockets to avoid damage due to overheating.
- Environmental temperatures will affect battery performance, such as extreme cold and heat.
- When charging, the Power Bank will be slightly warm, which is normal for operation.
- Do not move the Power Bank near fire or other heat sources in order to avoid danger.
- Do not expose this product to water or moisture, direct sunlight, or corrosive chemical cleaners.
- Do not drop, strike, vibrate, or shake the unit. Rough handling can damage internal precision components or the circuits of the unit.
- Please keep this product and related accessories out of the easy reach of children for safety in your home.
- Avoid contact of the Power Bank and connection ports with metal objects. Contact with metal may cause a short circuit and damage the internal components of the unit.
- Unauthorized alteration of this product or repair by the user may make the unit inoperable and will void the warranty.
- In accordance with local laws, ordinances, and regulations, use of the Power Bank without permission may be prohibited in some situations, such as during the landing of aircraft or in the vicinity of medical equipment. Discontinue charging the unit and immediately turn off your cell phone or other electronic devices in order to avoid interference.
